MONDAY EVENING, SEPT. 19, 1901.

The Wisconsin Republican state convention will be held next Wednesday at Madison, and the certainty that the ticket nominated will be elected makes the signing exceedingly lively. Candidates are as thick as blackberries, and an interesting time is anticipated when the convention meets. At the last election Wisconsin gave President Garfield nearly 50,000 majority. She is about as firmly wedded to Republican principles as any state in the west.

"The Jeffersonian Democracy of New York" will issue a call for a state convention in New York City, October 10. So says the Associated Press telegram. Now whether the Jeffersonian Democracy means the Tammany Democracy, the Irving Hall Democracy, the Tilden Democracy, the Short-Hair Democracy, the Swallow-Tail Democracy, or all of these together, we cannot undertake to say. All we know is that the Jeffersonian Democrats have been invited to convene. Mr. John Kelly or Mr. Samuel J. Tilden may rise and explain. But they will probably wait for the convention day to find out what the Jeffersonian Democracy means, and if it suits Mr. Tilden, John Kelly will not be pleased, and if it suits Mr. Kelly, Mr. Tilden will not be pleased. In any case a row may be looked for.

The Daily American Exchange, published in New York, says: "It is rumored that Levi Z. Leiter, of Chicago, has made Judge Hilton an offer for all the dry goods business of A. T. Stewart & Co."

Mr. L. U. BRADY, so long the champion of St. Louis as the Capital of the Nation, has abandoned his advocacy of that city and declared in favor of Alton, Ill., saying that the latter city "was decided by Nature for that purpose." He wants its name changed to the City of America.

The New York Times says of the late General Burnside: "He was, in many regards, a rare example of professional soldier—a character which he unconsciously sustained through his long career in civil life. Pure, upright, candid, generous and simple-hearted as a child, his very foibles were lovable, and his memory will be tenderly cherished."

In a letter to the police commissioners of Kansas City about the train robbery, Governor Crittenden of Missouri, says: "Your citizens should hold meetings, strong determined public meetings, in every township in your county, in condemnation of these crimes, and expressing the bold assertion that such crimes must and shall stop." That's the idea. Pass a few resolutions, and send a handsomely engrossed copy to the James Brothers. The governor has hit it at last.

A strong suspicion is creeping over the minds of the Democratic statesmen of Illinois that our own Carter is laying a net-work of pipes over the state which find their focus at Springfield. Whether it means the nomination for the United States senatorship or the governorship, is not yet developed, but there is considerable alarm among ambitious Democrats, who know by experience that Carter generally gets what he goes for. The empty honor of running on the Democratic ticket for either of these offices in Illinois is not enough to warrant a race against so formidable a candidate, and so none as Carter enters on to the track with the eagle's head and tail up, you will see the other aspirants trotting back to their stalls.—Inter Ocean.

SAYS the Cincinnati Commercial:

There was never a more striking illustration of the difference between a brave man and a coward than the demeanor of President Garfield and the upstart Guiteau after they were fired on. When the ill-omened assassin sent his bullet into the president's back, the wounded man half turned to face his assailant before he fell. There was no thought of fear in his soul then, not for a single instant. There never has been since, from that day to this, though the president has looked death in the eyes daily now for nearly three months.

In the midst of pain that was often terrifying, he has lain day after day, calmly waiting the fate in store for him, whatever it was to be. This heroic courage, this marvelous self-control, are what have kept him from death so far. On Sunday, the assassin, Guiteau, was shot at, and missed. The bullet did not pass even very near him. But the cowardly wretch was thrown into a cold sweat of terror. The guards who went to his cell, after the shot, found him huddled in the farthest corner writhing in fear and screaming for protection. He whined and howled like the dog he is, and begged to be removed to another cell. If anything could make mankind regard Guiteau with more loathing than they do already it would be this.

You will find health, wealth, and happiness in a bottle of the Big Blood and Liver Cure, called Dr. Marshall's Blood Purifier. It cures a bottle. Buy it of druggists.

Postal Matters in England.

The annual report of the Postmaster General of England, which is published in London papers of August 16, contains some very interesting facts in regard to the enormous progress made in the use of the conveniences offered by the postoffice to the public. "Twenty years ago," says the Times, "for a servant or a child, or a shopkeeper's assistant to have a sum in the savings bank was the exception, now it is almost the rule. The idea of using for this seemingly alien purpose the postoffice originally with its branches in every neighborhood and within the reach of all, was a stroke of genius, and its effect can hardly be overrated. For the present it is enough to say that the usefulness of this department goes on rapidly extending. There are now more than two millions of depositors; nearly three hundred new postoffice savings banks have been opened during the year; and the total amount of deposits reached almost thirty-four millions sterling."

A Baby Crying at the Stars.
San Francisco Chronicle.

In the grass of the feast grounds at Tazoo, A. T., Sunday night, a richly dressed Mexican girl baby was lying on her back and crying at the distant stars, when Colonel J. D. Dean discovered her. A large crowd soon gathered. One American lady offered the colonel $50 for the baby. A Mexican lady offered $20. Others wanted him to rattle her off, and as the excitement ran high, he might have cleared a thousand dollars had he wanted to do so. But he declined all offers, adopted the infant himself and put her in charge of a Mexican woman to be nursed.

A LONG BRANCH reporter writes to his paper: "The reading public cannot have a just appreciation of the difficulties a newspaper correspondent encounters to get down to bed-room fact. Bliss is always hopeful; Agnew and Hamilton will not submit to be interviewed, and as to Swain and Rockwell, one incurs their enmity if the daily report is not enthusiastic. Even when the President is having a fitful turn of it, it is when Swain, Rockwell & Co. are most exuberant. The accessible bureaus of information are, after all, bureaus of misinformation, calculated to mislead. It is all right when everything is moving well, but when a turn comes the truth only leaks through the Cabinet, who receive their reports confidentially from Agnew or Hamilton."

Grand Discoveries.
The discovery of a great remedy is frequently a matter of accident. This, however, is not the case with TARAXIN, now widely known and approved as an almost infallible remedy for Liver Complaint and diseases of the Kidneys and Bowels. The best physicians have for many years used various preparations of dandelion root in these diseases but with only indifferent success. After a long series of experiments, a combination, with the active principle of the dandelion as a basis, and other improved remedies to lighten its potency has been effected, and the desired specific for these diseases has been found in the product—TARAXIN.

Dr. A. J. Storer, agent.
WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 17.—Sergeant Mason, who shot at Guiteau, has written an address to the American people, which will be published to-day. His address is rather disconnected and incoherent, and was evidently prepared by himself. He admits that his act was cowardly, but maintains that he had justification for it. He refers to Guiteau as a miserable wretch who deserves no consideration such as a man is entitled to. Mason's address was written in reply to some newspaper article saying he would have been guilty of murder had he killed Guiteau. Mason denies this, holding that it would not have been murder for him to have killed a cowardly assassin who had shot down the President. Mason further says that he does not think soldiers should be required to guard a dog like Guiteau; that while he and other soldiers were outside, exposed to rain and bad weather, Guiteau, an assassin, was well housed and well fed; that jail guards are sheltered from weather and receive $100 per month for their service, while he and other soldier guards get only $13 per month. He refers particularly to his poor wife and children, and says he does not want to bear the brand of a would-be murderer for their sakes. Mason maintains that he did right, and says that his only regret is that he made a poor shot—that he did not kill Guiteau.

This address is not in the least of a whining or sentimental order. Mason evidently expects to be punished, and seems prepared to stand his punishment, but he holds, in effect, that Guiteau deserved summary punishment, and that he was justifiable in attempting to kill him.

Use the Best Free Charge.
Call at Storer's drug store and get a sample bottle of Brown's Expecto-rant free of charge. It cures coughs, hoarseness, whooping cough, and consumption in its early stages.

It is a scientific preparation, admirably adapted for the cure of all throat and lung diseases. It is pleasant to take and entirely harmless.

Try it. It costs you nothing. Regular size bottles 50 cents and $1.00. For sale by Dr. A. J. Storer, Agent.

Scientific Advancement.
Scientific advancement, it has been remarked, has been slower and less noticeable in the care of the sick and the treatment of disease than in any other department of human knowledge. The life or death of a patient is too frequently a mere matter of accident or chance. Some great discoveries, however, have been made and certain remedies are known and used with almost infallible cures. Such a remedy is TARAXIN, where disease of the Liver is involved, or where disease of the Kidneys or Spleen prevail. Dr. A. J. Storer, Agent.

TELEGRAPHIC

CHILLS EVERY DAY.

The President Evidently Growing Worse.

Hasty Return of the Cabinet

OFFICIAL BULLETIN.

ELBERON, Sept. 19, 9:00 A. M.—The condition of the President this morning continues unfavorable. Shortly after the issue of the evening bulletin he had a chill, lasting 15 minutes, the febrile rise following and continued until 12 midnight, during which time the pulse ranged from 112 to 130. The sweating that followed was quite profuse. The cough, which was troublesome during the chill, gave him but little annoyance the remainder of the night. This morning at 8 o'clock his temperature was 98.8; pulse 106 and feeble; respiration 22. At 8:30 another chill came on, on account of which the dressing was temporarily postponed. A bulletin will be issued at 12:30 p. m.

LONG BRANCH, Sept. 19, 12:30 p. m.—The chill from which the President was suffering at the time the morning bulletin was issued lasted about fifteen minutes, and was followed by febrile rise of temperature and sweating. He has slept much of the time, but his general condition has not materially changed since. Temperature 99.2, pulse 104, respiration 20.

LONG BRANCH, Sept. 17.—It was eight weeks ago the president had his first rigor. Prior to that time his condition had been such for thirteen days as to inspire a general belief in his ultimate recovery. The very day before the rigor came his condition had been more comfortable than at any time since he was shot. Suddenly, without any warning, the president was seized with a rigor, or chill. The pulse bounded up to 130, the temperature was as high as 104, and the respiration 26.—The physicians speedily ascertained the cause. Pus was confined somewhere, and the presence of pus in the system is so abhorrent to nature that unless it is speedily discharged, rigors, sweats, and possibly death will follow. At that time the physicians found that a pus cavity had been formed below the rib. An operation was necessary. The knife was used by Dr. Agnew. The cavity was opened, and instant relief followed. Physicians who have made a study of the blood and the diseases to which it is liable, recognized these rigors at that time, not only as indications of confined pus, but of blood-poisoning. No doubt exists that the rigor of this morning was caused by confined pus. It cannot be learned to-night whether the physicians know where the confined pus is. It may be in the lung. It may be in the track of the wound. It may be a new abscess. Of itself, the rigor or chill was not necessarily an alarming event, but the reason it is alarming lies in the fact that it not only shows that the blood poison has not been in the slightest degree eliminated since the president was brought to Long Branch, but also that an additional corrupting influence has been developed. It almost destroys the hope that the tonic of the sea air might vitalize the blood and enable nature to throw off the contaminating agent. The probability is that the abscesses in the lungs are accountable for the alarming symptoms of the day. Some of the physicians are now of the opinion that many small abscesses exist in the lungs, similar to those that appeared in the parotid gland. Yesterday and the day before—in fact since leaving Washington—the president has coughed constantly, and raised, without difficulty, the mucus and pus which gathered in the lungs. But for the past 24 hours he has not coughed so much, and raised less foreign matter. While many regarded this as a favorable sign, the fact is it would have been far better if there had been more coughing and freer expectoration. In this case, as in some types of consumption, when coughing and expectoration diminish, trouble is likely to ensue. The little abscesses that are forming all over the lung cannot be reached with the knife, as were those in the parotid gland. It is quite possible, therefore, that nature's protest at the gathering in the lungs led to the rigor. The many small, instead of one large abscess, will prevent an operation on the lung. But little doubt now exists that the track of the wound has been dammed up, and behind this accumulation of pus were possibilities, however, unlikely, that the debilitated condition of the President may have had something to do with the rigor. The circulation of the blood is poor, and there is comparatively little vitalizing force in the sluggish circulation that is now going on. Whatever may be the cause of the chill of to-day, it has not been removed, as was the case on July 23. The admission made by Dr. Bliss to the statement of Dr. Boynton that other chills were to be feared, and might very likely show themselves to-night, indicates that the physicians do not think they have reached and overcome the cause.

There is a very grave anxiety tonight. The fear of other rigors is confessed, and the occurrence could not happen more than two or three times without greatly endangering life. The President is so weak that no appearance of a rally would console the physicians if there should be more than three of these rigors, and he has probably had two within twenty-four hours. The vomiting, the delirium, and the profuse perspiration that accompanied the rigor of this morning were not especially alarming. They were only incidents, and, in fact, really a part of the rigor itself, so that it was exhaustion which followed. After the reaction had been established the President dropped into a sleep, which was more like a stupor than like a sleep, and he has been in this condition most of the afternoon. Emaciated of pure beef blood have been administered, but how much has been absorbed is not known. In brief, the condition is extremely critical. The President may live some weeks—may survive. On the other hand, death may come at any time.

Two members of the Cabinet arrived at 9 this evening. They were Postmaster-General James and Secretary Windom. Secretary Blaine left Augusta to-night for Long Branch, and Secretaries Lincoln and Kirkwood are expected to-morrow. Those members of the Cabinet who have been to the White Mountains left Boston at 11 this morning. At Springfield they got Attorney-General MacVeagh's dispatch stating that there had been a rigor. When they arrived to-night they were very solicitous. They said they had seen on their trip evidences of the greatest anxiety for the latest news from Long Branch. Attorney-General MacVeagh says to-night at midnight that he awaits the passage of the next forty-eight hours with the greatest anxiety.

LONG BRANCH, Sept. 18.—The president's condition at the morning dressing was comparatively favorable, but the more cautious did not entertain sanguine opinions that the patient was safely beyond the effects of yesterday's rigor. This morning passed very comfortably, and Judge Advocate General Swain went so far as to express an opinion that the president was having the most favorable Sunday which he has passed for several weeks. Information obtained from one of the attending surgeons was to the effect that the patient was having a reasonably comfortable day, and indications warranted the opinion that no complications need be immediately apprehended. At midday Boynton said he felt rather more encouraged at the risen temperature, 100, as it was conclusive evidence that the president had considerable vitality left.

"The cough was unimproved, and I think as the patient gains strength it will become annoying, as heretofore. There was great fear this morning that rigor would occur, and in order to obviate its development the attending surgeons ordered an application of hot cloths, which proved a successful treatment. There were indications of cooling extremities, but hot applications brought on a rise in temperature, and the coolness gradually wore away. Had the rigor occurred this morning it would, it is thought, have been a very serious one, as the patient was extremely enfeebled."

Notwithstanding the comparatively favorable condition noted in the evening bulletin, in less than an hour after its issuance, another rigor occurred, lasting about ten minutes. In comparison with the one yesterday it was light, though, as Bliss remarked, it was severe enough. There was a slight improvement compared with yesterday. The low pulse and temperature, sound sleep and freedom from cough and expectoration, are indicators of a low state of vitality, and cannot be considered favorable symptoms. If he grows stronger there will be a rise in pulse and temperature, and his cough and expectoration will return. About 11 o'clock his temperature rose, his pulse reached 120, his cough came back and he expectorated considerable quantities of pus; he also had pretty free perspiration.

A portion of the right lung, reaching up to the sixth rib, is now consolidated. For several weeks at times he has made improvement, but in each instance a relapse has followed, which has left him on a lower plane of vitality than before. The president has a wonderful constitution, but it is doubtful if it is sufficient to carry him to recovery.

At 10 o'clock to-night Secretaries Windom, Hunt, Kirkwood, Attorney-General MacVeagh, and Assistant Secretary of State Hitt called at Private Secretary Brown's cottage to ascertain the president's condition. No vomiting occurred, and the patient experienced an immediate reaction after the rigor subsided by the appearance of fever.

When asked for a cause for the recurrence of rigors, the doctor said: "It may be due to local causes, but so far they are not manifested. I think the recurrence is due to the enfeebled condition of the patient. The depraved condition of the fluids, together with local sores, are sufficient to produce chills. It is evident he has not repaired any during the past twenty-four hours, but has merely held his own."

Continuing, Dr. Bliss said: "The President has taken nourishment as usual during the day. He was more cheerful and bright during the afternoon. With the exception of milk punch, no food had been given him. Two and one-half ounces of delectable beef blood had been administered by enemata during the morning, and about three ounces more will be administered during the night. It is not probable that another chill will occur during the night. The dullness of the lung has not extended. Coughing has been very slight to-day, and was mentioned by Mrs. Garfield as 'having been less than yesterday.' Coughing was renewed with the chill. No repair of the wound has occurred for three or four days, and no healthy granulations are visible. Three weeks ago the cavity of the wound would hold two and a half ounces of water, while at present it holds one ounce. In the opinion of Dr. Bliss there was a cavity of pus in the lungs. The President is no better to-night than last night. I do not consider him any worse. There was no aberration of his mind during the febrile rise. The President takes the same notice of his condition as he has done all along, and he thoroughly understands it. It is reasonable to expect some rigor every twenty-four hours.

A reporter said to Dr. Bliss: "Doctor, the President has had an exceedingly hard time."

"It has been a fearful fight, and you on the outside have no idea of it." During the course of further conversation Dr. Bliss admitted the situation was critical. "But," said he, "there is still a chance for his recovery, and he is entitled to that chance."

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 17.—During the last ten days Secretary Windom has been criticized for not having used more of the available cash in the Treasury for the purchase of the bonded debt. It has been asserted that he was abundantly able in July to have used between $20,000,000 and $25,000,000, instead of $10,000,000, in the purchase of bonds, and that during August he was similarly situated. It has been claimed by some of the leading financial journals of New York that during the present month the cash balance in the Treasury has been nearly $20,000,000 larger than it was twelve months ago. Inquiry at the Treasury Department to-day developed the fact that, at the beginning of the present month, the available cash balance was over $4,000,000 less than it was at the beginning of September last year, and if the outstanding bonds embraced in the 184th call be deducted, as they properly should be, it is safe to say that, despite the large revenues of the present month, the cash balance to-day is probably $15,000,000 less than it was this time last year. The fact is that, during the last few months, there were at times quite heavy drafts made upon the Treasury reserve. Hence it will be seen that there is at present no such extraordinary accumulation of available surplus in the Treasury as is claimed by some of the New York financial writers and speculators.

Take other day the Litchfield Coal Company that has been prospecting for oil

near their Litchfield shaft, at a depth of 65 feet, struck what promises to be a rich stream. At least according to it was flowing about 14 gallons per minute.

Don't send away from Decatur to have your shirts made, but patronize home industry by leaving your orders with Henry

Harris, proprietor of the Decatur Shirt

Factory. His office is over S. T. Keeler's hat store in Powers' Block. Mr. Harris has been in Decatur for two years and will remain here permanently. He does all his work in first-class style, and makes shirts of nearly every grade 50 to 75 cents

cheaper than they can be had in this or any other city, and the beauty of it is,

every shirt is a perfect fit.

MR. EVERTS, of the firm of Bear &

Einstein, will leave this evening for Chicago to make fall and winter purchases

of millinery, notions and ladies' furnishing goods for the firm. Special pains will be taken to select one of the finest and prettiest displays of goods ever shown in Decatur. The firm has engaged one of the most skillful milliners to be had in Chicago, who will arrive here on Monday

Sept. 19th. She will introduce all the very latest metropolitan styles in the millinery line. Please call and examine the new stock as it will commence to arrive

the first of next week. Sept 17 dit

In Trouble.

Wingate, the Lamp store man, says

the St. Louis Summer Cooking Stove

Factory cannot make stoves as fast as he can sell them; their excellence and cheapness is what's the matter. Everybody that sees them in operation wants

one right off. [June 3 dit]

ARTICLES of association of the Cerro

Garde Short Line Railroad company have been filed in the office of the secretary of state at Springfield. It is proposed to construct a railroad by the most practicable route from the town of Maroa, in the county of Mason, to the city of Charleston, in the county of Coles. The capital stock is $1,000,000, and the incorporators are Thos. W. Harris, E. H. Jeffries, V. B. Clifton, H. O. Gaston, W. L.

Pitts, all of Platt county; John H. Crocker,

of Maroa, and James K. Cunningham,

of Charleston. The first five of these constitute the board of directors.

P. W. ROACH, a Wabash brakeman of this city on the first section of train 53,

of which Bert Cornsaw was conductor, met with a painful accident while attempting to connect cars at Huntington on the St.

Louis division, on Sunday. His right hand was badly mashed by the bumper.

Roach was returned to Decatur and was attended by the Drs. Chenoweth, who cut out the bone of the middle finger up to the wrist, and will endeavor to save the hand.

These colored people throughout this and other states are making preparations to attend the first annual pilgrimage to the tomb of Abraham Lincoln at Springfield,

Ill., September 22. Decatur's colored population will doubtless be well represented. The following gentlemen have
